

Vanhack Challenge | Presentation

Jobfinder Website

Ux/UI Visuals work process

By Ana Carolina Toledo

The challenge I received from vanhack team, was to create a new job search website, with:

- Job board
- Job filters
- Job details

In this case, I did not have to work on a specific problem solving, but to create a new website tool. I also worked this layout thinking in a responsive way, so if we decide to do a mobile version in the future, that will be a easy thing.

My Process in this project

As an Ux designer, my work here was to identify and know a little more about the user of this website before anything. Who they are and why these people will use my website.

There are a lot of ways to go on with a UX process but according to the deadline I had, I used UX and Design systems best practices to build a personal process for this specific job:

Ux

Ui and Visual

- 1 Personas creation
- 2 Website Map Study
- 3 Wireframes + low fidelity prototype
- 4 Branding
- 5 Visual Layout
- 6 Prototype and validate

Personas study is the name given for the use of empathy to create a unique person profile. In some Ux process, this profiles are created based on field interviews or by online forms interview with the target, but in this case I dont have enough time to do it so I used empathy and supposition, since designers do not always have the time they want for some projects, work with the emphaty for personas creation is a normal and a good practice to save time and and is very common practice on th bussiness.

Summary

In this profile, we have a person who has just left college, is someone extremely bold who is not afraid to take risks and is looking for a great job in his area. He is a young person, extremely connected to the internet, who uses many online services

A website map is a very important part of the process. Is here where it's start to put the first visual idea and is where the talk with the development team starts and where all this people working together, see what will be ok for each feature, technologically speaking, and to adapt everything that does not work

Tools Used

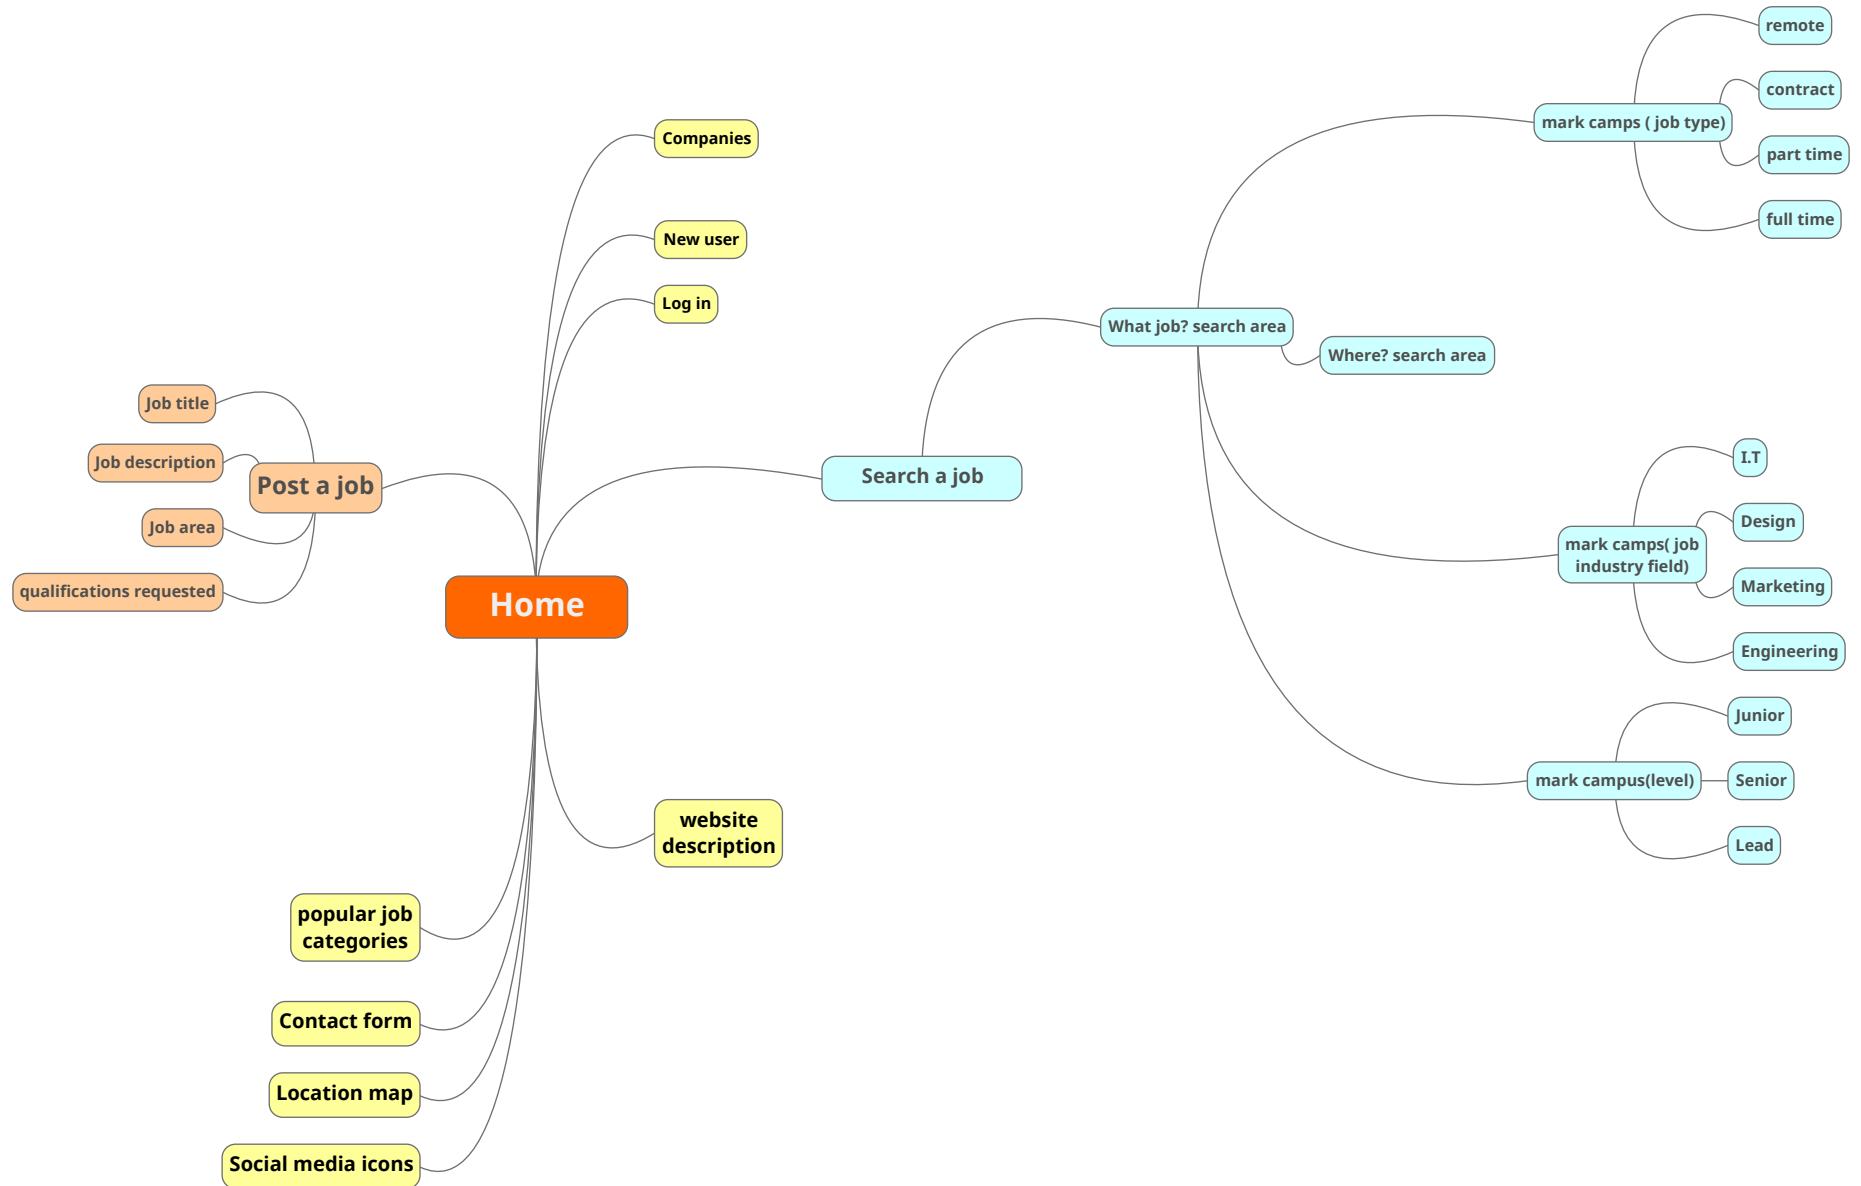

Ux

- 1 Personas creation
- 2 Website Map Study
- 3 Wireframes + low fidelity prototype

Ui and Visual

- 4 Branding
- 5 Visual Layout
- 6 Prototype and validate

In this part of the process, a wireframe is done, to continue this development team process talking and to give the visual designer a more understanding about how the visual layout could be work. So, based on all the work we have done until this point, I did the website wireframe

Job Search

A wireframe for a job search interface. The layout includes a top navigation bar with a placeholder icon, 'Log in', 'New User', and a 'Companies' button. The main content area features a large placeholder image. Below this is a search section titled 'Search a job' with two input fields: 'What job?' (containing 'UX Designer') and 'Where?' (containing 'San Jose'). Below the inputs are four filter buttons: 'Job Type', 'Level', 'Industry', and 'Company'. The 'Job Type' dropdown is open, showing four options: 'Remote', 'Part time', 'Full Time', and 'Contract'. Below the filters is a call to action: 'Join the Best Job Search Community'. The footer contains three icons with text: a smartphone icon for 'Apply for jobs faster', a document icon for 'Be found for the best companies', and a person icon for 'Get advices from our Human Resource team'.

Job Search Filters
